Transparency is the part of a layer where there is no color. Fuzzy: Fuzzy is the blurred part of an image where the pixels are not distinct and their colors are more like gray instead of the color of a clear image. "So I am interested in who is going to be running the organisation next, because there's a lot of work to be done in repairing the damage. "The EU allows all workers to access jobs across the European Economic Area, including Britain. "Some of the other policies they have, including the one-way free movement of labour, if it is not to the benefit of the EU's citizens, then it's not in the interests of the British citizen," he added. Not all the news was bad though. Although he believes that no deal is 'unacceptable' for the UK, he also said that he was positive about the direction of the country. not trust the rest of my team because I know they will sell me out like they have so many times before! I found this phrase to be quite fitting since I have some doubts about the sincerity of everything that's being put out and the way everything happens. I'd like to think that the first is justified, but the latter makes me wonder, and it concerns me that I don't trust any of them. Nice post! I like the idea of wondering about others' motives and being suspicious. It seems to be a defensive mechanism to me. I remember as a kid, when my parents were so angry about something that a part of me wondered what they were trying to hide. My dad had a 4 year old and I was 2, and I remember one day he was apparently in the process of bringing his imaginary model airplane into my room. It was made of cardboard and he had carefully sliced out the wings and tail and was spinning it in my arms so it would be ready to fly when I woke up in the morning. I remember shaking my head, wondering why he was being so weird and yet all I really wanted was my toy! So I guess it really comes down to the question of what a person's motivations are for different situations, and how they can be determined. I think we would all like to think that people are always acting in good faith, and sometimes they are, and sometimes they're not. There are times in my life when I'm not certain whether people are telling me the truth or not. I do tend to trust people more when I know them a bit
